PREFACE.

CLASSMATES: — In compiling this my seventh report, I have followed the usual custom of giving a connected account of each classmate from time of graduation.

The information herein presented has been, for the most part, obtained directly from each individual, in response to the following circular: —

CLASSMATES: — The Seventh Annual Report of the Secretary is due on Commencement Day, June 24, 1891, — the twentieth anniversary of our graduation. To enable me to present a report that shall be reasonably satisfactory to us all, I request you to make such changes as you may wish in the accompanying slip from the last report, and to send me the following data regarding your lives and careers since 1886: —

1. Present occupation and residence, together with changes since last report.

2. Marriage, if since last report, with date and place. Please give full maiden name of wife, her residence, and her parents' names in full. Names of children in full, with dates and place of birth. Death of wife or children, with dates.

3. Literary, scientific, political, or commercial work performed or honors received. Exact titles and dates of any books, pamphlets, magazine articles, etc. Clubs or societies of which you are or have been a member, with offices held in them. Any special interests which occupy your attention, or any item which you think will interest your classmates.

4. College degrees not mentioned in accompanying slip.

5. Any extended or interesting journey or trips, with dates.

6. Your present post-office address.

As this report must be prepared at odd times, I trust you will all do me the favor of sending in your replies as promptly as possible.

I said above "in response to the following circular," but, in point of fact, in many instances it required several copies of the circular, together with a personal appeal, before many of our very modest and retiring classmates would consent to have their successes known to the rest of the class. By persistent efforts, however, I have finally succeeded in getting some information, directly or indirectly, about all but four of our number, and I give you their names in order that you may consider yourselves, each and all, specially delegated to send me anything you may happen to know about them. They are Brown, Kimball, Twombly, and Wentworth.

I cannot think that this delay on the part of some, or the absence of any reply from the above-named fellows, is due to lack of interest in the class, and I can readily believe that the following letters from two of the dilatory members express pretty well the sentiments of them all: —

My Dear Albert: — What's the use? After a man has married and settled, what is there he can say of himself, if he do not chance to be a phenomenon? Most men go to the office and go home again, eat, sleep, and pay their bills — if they can.

The only other record one can make is of his success in helping along the census.

If I could furnish "copy" for the report, I would gladly do so.

Dear Barnes: — "Three attempts on my life," in the hope of "getting something out of me" — of me — empty-pocketed and empty-headed me! Gad, man! the most microscopic of autopsies wouldn't reveal the faintest indication of value. I'm still here, crawling along over the face of terra firma in the electric glare of this hustling nineteenth century. My occupation is a clerical one, and my residence this elysium of the rich in pocket and the poor in spirit — New York City. That is the whole of it. Not an honor, not a decoration, not even a magazine article — in fact, little else upon my breast save a tramp's shirt. As regards special interests, my attention is occupied with little save my work, though I do occasionally look up from it to see "What fools these mortals be!" I know of no item that may interest my classmates, save, perhaps, that I long since abandoned the survey of the heavens and have taken to digging the earth. The sun is pretty near the horizon, it is true, but the parable of the vineyard and the eleventh hour haunts me still!

But these men seem to lose sight of the fact that the secretary doesn't even know that they haven't done anything unless they tell him so, and that the most natural thing for the secretary to assume is that every man Jack of us has done something worthy of record during the past five years; so, if they had considered for a moment that the secretary was only working for the common good of the class, endeavoring to get together such facts as are of interest to all of us, I am sure they would have been much more prompt in sending in their answers. However, it is not my wish to make this preface a scolding letter, so I will drop that subject with the hope that when you are called upon for material for the eighth report, five years hence, you will all respond promptly.

The work of compiling this report has been pleasant on the whole, and I trust it will afford you all as much pleasure to read it as it has me to edit it.

As shown by my report in 1886, the Class Fund at that time amounted to $4,905.14. The additional subscriptions and the income on our investments during the past five years amount to $1,561.23, and our expenses for the dinners on our fifteenth anniversary and the two hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the college, for printing the last report, and for our annual entertainments on commencement days, have been $906.52, showing a gain of $654.71. Against this, however, we have suffered a loss of $686 in our investments, by reason of the purchase of twenty shares of Atchison Railroad stock in 1887 (an investment which seemed safe at the time, and which was certainly so considered by many who were far more competent to judge than I), so that our fund now stands in my books at $4,873.85, invested as follows: —

	Cost value.
1 C. B. & Q. R.R., first mortgage, 7's	$1,000 00
1 Chicago sewerage, 7's	1,000 00
1 Atchison first mortgage, 4's ($1,000)[1] / 1 Atchison income, 5's ($500)	1,102 70
1 Atchison income, 5's ($1,000)	548 75
5 shares N.E. Telephone and Telegraph Co.	218 75
$520 in Atlantic Insurance scrip, 6's	541 40
Cash in bank	462 25
Total	$4,873 85

As the whole amount of the Class Fund, as raised by subscriptions, was only $4,190.38, we are still in a very comfortable financial condition.

I desire to call your attention to that portion of the report relating to those who were with us in college but did not graduate with us. I have inserted such information regarding these men as I have been able to obtain, and I hope you will each add to it if you can.

[1] Taken in exchange for $1,000 Atchison Trust 6's on hand, per last report.

Kindly notify me of any errors you may find herein, and advise me promptly of any change in your addresses.

ALBERT M. BARNES,
Secretary.

HARVARD COLLEGE.

CLASS OF 1871.

* AIKEN, WILLIAM HENRY. Born at Newton Centre, Mass., May 16, 1849. Died at Malden, September 16, 1885.

Was engaged in teaching for a while after graduation. Entered the Harvard Medical School in September, 1879, and received the degree of M.D. in June, 1882; was surgical interne at Carney Hospital, in 1882; October, 1882, was admitted to membership of the Massachusetts Medical Society; practised his profession in Malden, Mass., up to the time of his death.

At the annual meeting on Commencement Day, 1886, the Class adopted the following tribute to his memory: —

William Henry Aiken, died September 16, 1885.

The Class of 1871, assembled at its annual meeting, desires to express its sympathy with the family and friends of classmate Aiken, and to extend to them its sense of the loss suffered by his death.

He fought bravely against the many obstacles in his path through life, and won the respect and esteem of all his associates in college. Modest and retiring in disposition, he was always faithful and conscientious in the discharge of his duties, and his success in his brief career gave promise of a life of usefulness.

AMORY, FRANCIS INMAN. Travelled abroad for two years, then entered the Harvard Law School; was graduated

June 30, 1875, and is now practising law in Boston; May 12, 1886, was married to Grace Josephine Minot, of Boston; June 27, 1887, Mary Josephine Amory was born; December 6, 1889, Charles Minot Amory was born.

AUSTIN, AMORY. After graduation studied chemistry at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, receiving the degree of S.B. in December, 1873; went abroad for four months in the summer of 1872; was in the brokerage business in Boston from July, 1874, to September, 1875, and in October, 1875, went abroad a second time and remained there five years, studying chemistry and travelling; returned to Boston, September, 1880, and commenced the business of analytic chemist, which he continued until 1889. In April, 1889, was appointed secretary to Professor Charles V. Riley, the celebrated entomologist, who was Agricultural Commissioner at the Paris International Exposition of 1889; sailed for Europe, April 10, and was present at the exposition during the whole time that it was open. Also travelled in France, Germany, and England, and returned to the United States in January, 1890, when he was invited by Professor Riley to go to Washington and aid in preparing the "United States Report upon Agriculture at the Exposition;" one article of the report will appear over his signature. In November, 1890, was appointed a special agent at the Agricultural Department, Washington, upon the Rocky Mountain Agricultural Survey, and now occupies that position. He writes, "I am still an 'old bach.,' and likely to remain so. If the fact is worthy of record, I am a member of the 'Sons of the American Revolution.'"

* AUSTIN, PERCY. Born at West Roxbury, Mass., September 4, 1850. Died at same place, March 19, 1877.

Studied law in the office of Henry W. Paine and R. D. Smith, from September, 1871, to December, 1873, and was then admitted to the Suffolk bar; January, 1874, his name was changed from William Percy Austin to Percy Austin; in the fall of 1874 he took a trip to San Francisco for his health, and in the spring of 1876 he made a similar trip through Texas and the Southwest; he continued the practice of law, so far as his health would allow, until his death.

At the annual meeting on Commencement Day, 1877, the Class adopted the following tribute to his memory: —

The Class of 1871, assembled at its annual gathering, desires to put on record its sense of loss in the death of its classmate, Percy Austin. While the loss falls heaviest upon those who, from their intimacy with him, best knew the sterling traits of his character, there is no one of the Class who does not feel what its ranks have suffered by his removal. Percy Austin's essential characteristic was integrity. He was upright to his friend, his classmate, and his fellowman. Each knew just where to find him, and knew that from that position he never could swerve. In friendship, in study, in athletic sport, and in the prolonged agony of incurable disease and daily death, he showed the same faithful, indomitable spirit. The memory of such a spirit is to us a rich inheritance. What his broken strength and early summons prevented him from doing, in a generation so much in need of his fearless honesty, may we endeavor to do in memory and in imitation of him.

BACKUS, HENRY CLINTON. Studied law at the Columbia College Law School, receiving the degree of LL.B., and was admitted to the New York bar in 1873; has since been practising law in New York City; has served seven years on the Republican County Committee, and been twice elected delegate to the Republican State Convention; is a Fellow of the American Geographical Society, and a member of the Harvard Club; September 24, 1890, was married to Harriet Ivins Davis, daughter of Samuel Wilmer and Jane Hastings Davis, of New York, and made an extended tour through the West; June 20, 1891, a daughter was born.

BARNES, ALBERT MALLARD. Entered the office of Foster, Candler, & Company, Boston, in August, 1871, and in November, 1872, was sent as supercargo to the west coast of Africa; returned in September, 1874, and entered the office of Charles O. Foster; in January, 1876, was admitted as a partner under the style of Charles O. Foster & Company; since October, 1882, has been a member of the School Committee of Cambridge, and was elected presiding officer of the Board for the year 1891; January 1, 1890, withdrew from the firm of Charles O. Foster & Company, and started the firm of Albert M. Barnes & Company; November 10, 1874, was married to Emily L. Carter, of Cambridge; October 6, 1875, Allan Foster Barnes was born; December 16, 1876, Karl Schenck Barnes was born; September 14, 1880, Donald Carter Barnes was born.

BARTLETT, NELSON SLATER. After graduation travelled in Europe. Is engaged in the iron business in Boston, under firm name of N. S. Bartlett & Company; June 26, 1873, was married to Isabel H. Bullock, daughter of the Hon. Alex. H. Bullock; April 1, 1874, Elvira Bartlett was born; January 19, 1877, another daughter was born, who died February 28, 1877; April 2, 1879, Matthew Bartlett was born; April 20, 1881, Nelson S. Bartlett, Jr., was born.

BASS, GEORGE. Is practising law in Chicago; in November, 1890, was elected to the Illinois State Senate.

BASSETT, FRANCIS. After graduation studied law in the office of the Hon. C. T. Russell; July 1, 1873, gave up law and went into business as a member of the firm of Crocker, Wade, & Bassett; April, 1874, firm changed to Wade & Bassett; July, 1878, firm changed to Wade, Bassett, & Company; and this firm was dissolved April 1, 1883. Went abroad in 1883, and is now engaged in collecting information at the British Museum and Guildhall libraries, London, for a work on unclaimed property; December 8, 1887, was married in London to Catherine Elizabeth Anderson, daughter of David and Mary Anderson, of Glasgow, Scotland.

* BERRY, CLARENCE HEREFORD. Born in Gloucester, Mass., December 26, 1849. Died at North Andover, Mass., June 22, 1881.

Immediately upon leaving Harvard took charge of the Castine, Me., High School; was called to the Ellsworth, Me., school in less than a year, and from this school went to Cherryfield, Me.; in September, 1875, took charge of the Canton, Mass., High School, and remained there till April, 1881, when he was compelled by ill health to resign; December 28, 1870, was married to Lillie G. Tucker, of East Gloucester, Mass.; August 24, 1871, Hereford Berry was born; June 17, 1877, Alfred Dwight Berry was born.

At the annual meeting on Commencement Day, 1882, the Class adopted the following tribute to his memory: —

The Class of 1871, assembled at its annual meeting, desires to extend its sympathy to the family and relatives of their deceased classmate, Berry, and to express its sorrow for his loss. Remembering his devotion to his studies in college and his faithful application to his profession after graduation, we regret that his early death has removed one whose ability as a teacher gave promise of such good results.

BIGELOW, WILLIAM STURGIS. Was graduated at the Harvard Medical School in 1874, and went abroad the same summer; returned in the autumn of 1879, and began practising medicine in Boston; was appointed surgeon to out-patients at the Massachusetts General Hospital, and assistant in surgery at the Harvard Medical School; was also appointed, with Professors Wood and Bowditch, of the Harvard Medical School, to investigate and report on the action of antiseptics, for the National Board of Health; has written and published in medical journals one or two articles on such subjects as "Septicæmia" and "The Relation of the Nucleus to Cell Division." In reply to the last circular he writes: —

"'Story? God bless you, I have none to tell, sir! Since '81 I have spent about seven years in Japan, where I saw a good many folks of high and low degree, got together some things of various sorts for the Boston Museum of Fine Arts, went several times with the Government Archæological Expeditions in exploring the temples, etc., about the country, and learned a little about Eastern philosophy and religion. I have neither wife nor children, have written no books, received no special honors, and I belong only to the regular clubs and societies; but I hope the twenty years since '71 have left you more hair than they have me."

BOARDMAN, EDWARD CHADWICK. Studied law at the Columbia College Law School, New York, and received the degree of LL.B. in 1873; since then he has practised law in New York; is a member of the Harvard, University, and Players' Clubs, New York.

BONAPARTE, CHARLES JOSEPH. Was a resident graduate at Cambridge the first year after graduation, and then attended the Harvard Law School, where he was graduated in June, 1874; was admitted to the bar of Maryland in September, 1874, and has since practised at Baltimore; September 1, 1875, was married at Newport, R.I., to Ellen Channing Day, of Boston.

BOOTH, EDWARD CHAUNCEY. Studied medicine at the Harvard Medical School, from September, 1871, to February, 1873, when he went south; February, 1876, resumed his medical studies at the Harvard Medical School, and in January, 1877, was appointed house pupil in the Massachusetts General Hospital; received his degree of M.D. in June, 1877, and was admitted to Massachusetts Medical Society the same year; was district physician to the Boston Dispensary from October, 1878, to October, 1879; was abroad two years and a half, studying and travelling; January 1, 1883, was appointed second assistant physician, and June 1, 1886, medical director, of the State Asylum for Insane, at Morristown, N.J.; August 2, 1888, resigned the position of medical director, and is now residing in Somerville; is a member of the N.J. Historical Society.

BOWEN, CHARLES STUART. Is living in Cambridge.

BOYD, WILLIAM WILLARD. Passed the first year after graduation in Germany; was proctor at Harvard from September, 1872, to July, 1873; received and accepted a call from the First Baptist Church, Charlestown, Mass., where he remained until May, 1877; then accepted a call to St. Louis, as pastor of the Second Baptist Church; in ——— accepted a call to become pastor of the Peddie Memorial Church at Newark, N.J., where he now is; is trustee of Shurtleff College, Upper Alton, Ill.; trustee, William Jewell College, Liberty, Mo.; curator, Stephen's College, Columbia, Mo.; counsellor, La Grange College, La Grange, Mo.; trustee, Female Seminary, Kirkwood, Mo.; counsellor, Female College, Greenville, Ill. In June, 1878, Shurtleff College conferred upon him the degree of D.D. Has written and published "Lectures on Europe," "Resurrection of Christ," "God in Nature," "Relation of Capital and Labor," and also various pamphlets. June 2, 1880, was married to Cora Dunham; May 19, 1881, William Dunham Boyd was born.

BRADLEE, DUDLEY HALL. Was proprietor of a large chain manufactory at Philadelphia, firm of Bradlee & Company, until 1876, and since then he has been engaged in the heavy hardware business in Boston; November 12, 1873, was married to Elizabeth T. Hall, of Medford; August 3, 1874, Horace Hall Bradlee was born; December 23, 1875, Dudley H. Bradlee, Jr., was born; May 27, 1877, Ruth Bradlee was born; May 4, 1879, Reginald Bradlee was born.

*BRADSHAW, CHARLES. Received the degree of LL.B. at Georgetown College, and was admitted to the bar of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia in the summer of 1873; was assistant clerk in the office of the Attorney-General of the United States until the spring of 1875, when he began practising in New York. He died at Washington, December 3, 1876.

At the annual meeting of the Class on Commencement Day, 1877, the following tribute to his memory was adopted: —

The Class of 1871, assembled at its annual meeting, desires to express its sympathy with the family and friends of its late classmate, Bradshaw, and to signify to them its sense of the loss suffered by his death. Possessed of an indomitable will, he fought bravely against the many obstacles in his pathway through life, and, by his steady perseverance and determination to win, he gained the respect of all and the esteem of those who were his associates in college. His success in his brief career gave promise of a bright future, and should serve as an example to all who meet with adverse circumstances in their every-day life.

* BREARLEY, SAMUEL. Born at Rocky Hall, N.J., December 29, 1850. Died at New York, December 6, 1886.

Devoted the most of his time to private tuition from 1871 to 1880; studied at Oxford, England, from 1880 to 1884, as a member of Baliol College, devoting himself principally to modern history; in the autumn of 1884 opened a school for girls in New York, and was engaged in that occupation until his death. An indication of the reputation he made during these two years is found in the fact that the school is still carried on under the name of the "Brearley School."

At the annual meeting on Commencement Day, 1887, the Class adopted the following tribute to his memory: —

On Monday, December 6, 1886, Samuel Brearley died at St. Luke's Hospital in New York City. His illness, typhoid fever, had been brief, and its fatal termination was a painful surprise to most of us. The facts of his life since he left college are so significant that their bare recital may well take the place of any eulogy. Unwilling to be longer a burden even on those most closely related to him, immediately after graduation he undertook the preparation of several applicants for admission to college, and was so uniformly and strikingly fortunate in his first pupils that he became at once noted as a private tutor. As such, his success was phenomenal; the quickness with which he gained the respect and affection of the young men committed to his charge, and the happy influence he invariably exerted on their lives and characters, caused his services to be so largely sought, that he might in a few years have retired with a modest competency had he been less scrupulous to acquit the moral obligation he held to rest upon him towards his family for the expenses of his collegiate education. He saved enough, however, to justify him in giving up private tuition, to fit himself for a career better suited to his tastes and aspirations. To this end he spent between two and three years at Oxford University, becoming well acquainted with the leaders of modern English thought, winning the esteem and confidence of all he met, and the warm friendship of many. He returned to the United States with good prospects of election as principal of the Phillips Academy, at Exeter, a position for which all who knew him believed him to be eminently fitted, and which he was willing to accept. But by the constitution of the school the principal must be a church member. Our classmate had already fully made up his mind to join the church, but he had not done so; and this was a step he would not take under circumstances which might raise any suspicion as to his motives. Giving up, therefore, all thought of Exeter, he formed a plan which, to many of his best friends, seemed of almost quixotic temerity: that of establishing a girls' school in New York, of a type of excellence hitherto unknown. After spending several months in necessary preliminary arrangements, he opened his school in October, 1884, obtaining during the first year fifty pupils. In the succeeding year the number rose to one hundred and fifteen, and for the year of which he has not lived to see the close, he had many more applications than he could accept. When it is remembered that Brearley was personally unknown in New York, that he had not only never kept a school, but had never taught in one, or taught girls at all, and that the school he founded was of a character so unusual that the most experienced person might well have hesitated to undertake it, these results may be fairly called wonderful. His success was the most unequivocal tribute to his worth. That so many parents should have intrusted their daughters to his care, and that he should have so promptly and thoroughly justified their confidence, tells better than any words could what manner of man he was.

But this success was purchased at a heavy price. Constant anxiety over an uncertain future and the thousand perplexities and errors of inexperience, added to the great efforts of mind and will which built up his school, sapped his health, already in some degree impaired, and he closed on the first Monday of last December a life short in years, but long in good works. Our classmate was not a mere teacher: he took a lively interest in literature, in charity, and in public affairs. On questions connected with education in the wider sense he entertained strong opinions, which, like all his views, he expressed clearly and fearlessly. The profound and general sorrow at his death testified to the belief of all who knew him, that he was a man the world could ill afford to lose.

BROWN, JESSE. Is in Washington, D.C., and is engaged in a small way in farming and stock-raising. [No report.]

* BUELL, BYRON WINFIELD. Born at Perinton, N.Y., March 20, 1846. Died at Mont Clair, N.J., May 15, 1875.

Received the degree of LL.B. at Columbia College Law School; was admitted to the New York bar in May, 1873, and practised law in New York City until his death.

At the annual meeting on Commencement Day, 1876, the Class adopted the following tribute to his memory: —

Whereas, Death has taken from us our friend, Byron W. Buell;

Resolved, That in his death we have lost one who had in full measure our affection and respect, whose character was irreproachable, whose manners were such as to win friends, whose ambition was high, and who, in his brief career, gave promise of success. He came to college dependent upon his own exertions, and in the face of great difficulties showed courage and resolution. In his professional study and subsequent practice, he worked diligently and with real appreciation of the dignity of the law. His earnest purpose was to be a faithful citizen.

That he was endeared to his friends by his genial nature, which found expression in pleasant greetings and unfailing goodwill.

That we extend our heartfelt sympathy to his family and friends in their deep affliction.

BULLOCK, RUFUS AUGUSTUS. Went abroad for two years immediately after graduation, returning to Worcester in July, 1873; entered the Harvard Law School in 1874; studied there two years, and in an office in Boston one year; was admitted to the Suffolk bar in 1877, and opened an office in Boston soon after.

BURGESS, EDWARD. After graduation devoted himself to the study of natural history; was secretary of the Boston Society of Natural History from March 6, 1872, until May, 1888, and instructor of Entomology at the Bussey Institute, 1879–83; during these years published various scientific essays, chiefly on insect anatomy; in October, 1883, went into business as a naval architect, since which time he has designed over two hundred yachts and other vessels, including the three defenders of the America's cup, "Puritan," "Mayflower," and "Volunteer"; received the honorary degree of A.M. from Harvard University in 1888; June 2, 1877, was married to Caroline L. Sullivant, daughter of the late William Starling Sullivant, of Columbus, Ohio; December 25, 1879, William Starling Burgess was born; April 9, 1888, Charles Paine Burgess was born.

BURNETT, EDWARD. Is proprietor of the Deerfoot Farm, at Southboro', Mass.; during 1879 he developed the centrifugal process of separating cream from milk; in November, 1886, was elected to Congress from the Ninth District of Massachusetts on the Democratic ticket; was president of the Bay State Agricultural Society, 1886–89; April 3, 1872, was married to Mabel Lowell, daughter of James Russell Lowell; February 4, 1873, James Lowell Burnett was born; December 28, 1874, Joseph Burnett, 2d, was born; January 31, 1878, Francis Lowell Burnett was born; March 7, 1879, Esther Lowell Burnett was born; May 26, 1881, Lois Burnett was born.

* BUSH, ARCHIBALD McCLURE. Born at Albany, N.Y., November 20, 1846. Died at Liverpool, England, December 18, 1877.

After graduation was in the office of the Troy Car Works, Gilbert Bush & Company, until January 1, 1872; then became treasurer of the Wheeler & Melick Company, located in Albany, N.Y.; October 24, 1877, was married to Margaret W. Boyd, of Albany, and shortly after sailed for Europe, where he died of typhoid pneumonia; July 31, 1878, Archibald McClure Bush, Jr., was born, but died October 19, 1878.

At the annual meeting on Commencement Day, 1878, the Class adopted the following tribute to his memory: —

In the death of our classmate, Archibald McClure Bush, we recognize the inscrutable ways of a Divine Master. As it was our privilege to share the friendship of one whose life, even in its brief existence, was a promise nobly fulfilled;

Resolved, That, while we keep in lasting memory our dear friend and classmate, ever mindful of the mainspring of his life, — chivalrous, unswerving devotion to duty, however high or humble, — we cherish his example as one worthy of our highest emulation. He was a leader among men, not as one who shall say, "I command!" but rather "Come, do this with me!" and while we, his contemporaries, were but entering our preparatory work for college, he was learning, in a harsher school, those lessons which, in after years, made his sound judgment and power over others so preëminent. He was the first to receive our admiration, not alone for the prowess that placed him above others, but because of those rare traits of character that endeared him to all. Modest, yet self-reliant; forgetful of personal interests, yet ever thoughtful and considerate for the welfare of those about him; generous, cheerful, and devout, — to the memory of such a life we offer our tribute of respect and love.

That we extend to the family of our beloved classmate our heartfelt sympathy, trusting that their grief for the loss of the son, the husband, and the brother may be softened in remembering the love his classmates bore him, and in the hope of another life that shall be without separation.

* CLARK, GALEN ALONZO. Born at Philadelphia, Pa., May 30, 1846. Died at Mariposa, California, April 19, 1873.

Went to Mariposa, California, in November, 1871, and remained there until his death.

At a meeting of the Class, May 9, 1873, classmates R. Ela, Otis, and Fox were appointed a committee to draw up appropriate resolutions and have them distributed among the classmates. The resolutions prepared were as follows: —

Whereas, It has become our sad duty to notice the death of our friend and classmate, Galen Alonzo Clark;

Resolved, That we feel deeply the blow which has so soon again fallen upon us, so sudden and unexpected, calling us to mourn the loss of one whose brilliant talents, energy, and manliness, already so conspicuously displayed, gave promise of a life of usefulness and prominence. His courage and perseverance exhibited in his struggle for an education, often against great obstacles, showed a firmness of character and a yearning for knowledge which must have made him respected and honored.

That his noble bearing, his genial ways, his helping hand, are remembered by us all, and we sincerely mourn that this life has so soon gone from among us.

That we heartily sympathize with his afflicted family and friends in their great sorrow, and trust that the memory of him will mitigate the grief they feel at his early death.

He writes: —

"Fairfield, Maine, June 7, 1891.

"My Dear Barnes, — You are very persistent in your requests for items to swell the Class History, and I regret that my life thus far has necessarily been of so even and commonplace a character that I cannot oblige you by sending an account teeming with literary successes, professional acquirements, or political preferment. Just at the present time I am watching the lumber market, the price current of hay, the growth of field crops, and my vegetable garden.

"My father died a year ago last November, leaving to me the management of his business, which, though not large, is such as to require constant attention. In village affairs I have been honored with all the offices I would accept. In church affairs have borne my burdens and have been importuned to run for town offices. These minor items, which are our common lot, and the 'might have beens' are not matters for a Class History. To satisfy your demands I enclose abstracts, which you are at liberty to abridge to your satisfaction.

"I should like much to be at the reunion, but feel it to be impossible, much as I desire to see old friends, particularly those you mention. Trusting that you will give my best regards to them all, I remain,

"Yours very truly,

"VIRGIL R. CONNOR."

CUTLER, ARTHUR TRUFANT. Entered the music-store of Root & Sons' Music Company, Chicago, shortly after graduating, and continued in their employ until July, 1876, when poor health necessitated a sea voyage to California; for a year acted as travelling salesman for Gray's music-store, San Francisco, travelling over California, Oregon, and Washington Territory; April 1, 1878, entered the employ of C. T. Raynolds & Company, San Francisco; January, 1883, returned to Chicago, and was with A. H. * DANA, CHARLES PEASLEY. Born at York Ripley, Minn., August 11, 1849. Died at Manitou Springs, Colorado, October 16, 1880.

Studied law in San Francisco a short time, and in the spring of 1872 entered a business life in the iron-mills; he left the Pacific coast later in the year on account of ill health, and was in the employ of the Chicago, Burlington, & Quincy Railroad up to 1878, when his health again failed him and he was obliged to give up all business.

At the annual meeting, Commencement Day, 1881, the following tribute to his memory was adopted: —

Charles Peasley Dana died in Colorado, October 16, 1880.

Upright and honorable in everything, his frank, manly disposition won the friendship of all his classmates. In our regret at his early departure we remember with pleasure his many excellent qualities, and would extend to his family our heartfelt sympathy in their bereavement.

DANA, ISRAEL PUTNAM. Was for two years usher in the Heathcote School, Buffalo, N.Y.; then in charge of the office of the collector of internal revenue for the district of Vermont at Montpelier, and studying law, until 1882, when he opened an office in Kansas City, Missouri; is attorney for the Kansas City, Fort Scott, & Memphis Railroad, and has been for two years president of the Kansas City University Club.

DEMING, HORACE EDWARD. From summer of 1871 to summer of 1873 was travelling and studying in Europe, most of the time in Germany, France, and Italy, but travelled quite extensively in several other countries, including Great Britain, the Netherlands, Switzerland, Greece, Palestine, and Egypt; from summer of 1873 to summer of 1874 was at Cambridge as a resident graduate; from 1874 to 1876 attended the Harvard Law School; was admitted to the Massachusetts bar in the summer of 1876; in the autumn of 1876 went to New York and entered the law office of McDaniel, Lummis, & Souther; in May, 1877, was admitted to the New York bar, and became junior member of the law firm of Johnson, Cantine, & Deming; in February, 1882, formed a law partnership, under the style of Deming & Hubbell, with Charles Bulkley Hubbell, a graduate of Williams College; this partnership was dissolved on March 1, 1886, and until May 1, 1889, practised his profession without partners; on May 1, 1889, formed a partnership, under the style of Deming & Logan, with Walter S. Logan, a Yale graduate of the Class of 1870. The business address is 58 William street, New York City.

In 1878, shortly after his marriage, went to Brooklyn to live, and resided there until the spring of 1885; in the autumn of 1880 was one of the executive committee of a Garfield campaign club, which, under the name of the Brooklyn Young Republican Club, took active part in the presidential campaign of that year. In the winter of 1880–81 a new club was organized under the same name, of which he was president and chairman of its executive committee from its formation until December, 1882, and chairman of its advisory committee until December, 1883; the club did effective work during the years 1881–83, especially in the cause of municipal reform; in December, 1882, on his retiring from the presidency, was given a public dinner at the Brooklyn Academy of Music by several hundred of the citizens of Brooklyn, in recognition of his services to the city. In the winter of 1883–84 took an active part in the formation of the Brooklyn Citizens' League, an organization composed of members differing among themselves in matters of national politics, but united on questions of local government; was a member of the executive committee of the league and chairman of its committee on legislation, which had specially in charge the supervision of legislation affecting the local interests of Brooklyn; during the presidential campaign of 1884 was a member of the national committee of Republicans and Independents, and was chairman of the national executive committee of that organization. In the spring of 1885, at the request of the Mayor of New York, made an investigation as special counsel for the Commissioners of Accounts into the condition of the office of the counsel to the corporation of the city of New York, and of the methods of transacting the city's law business. This proved to be a task unexpectedly difficult and prolonged, since there had never been a report of this character on or by the office, and the office records were not kept with reference to affording such information; he recommended, among other things, a thorough reorganization of the office force, an increase of office room, and that a system of regular annual reports to the mayor be introduced; these recommendations were followed, and the first of these annual reports appeared in 1886.

In June, 1885, removed his residence to New York City, and has resided there since that time; in 1886 organized with others the Commonwealth Club, which held monthly meetings for the purpose of discussing important political and economic questions; as a member of the executive committee of this club, examined into the history and methods of the Australian ballot system, and assisted in drafting the Ballot Reform Act, which was introduced in the New York Legislature in the winter of 1887, and has been made the basis of the genuine ballot reform measures now enacted into law by Massachusetts and numerous other States; in 1889 served as member of the executive committee and chairman of the general committee of the New York Ballot Reform League, which, in the winter of 1889–90, succeeded in securing the adoption of the so-called Compromise Ballot Reform Law by the New York Legislature, and which, it is believed, will open the way to securing complete and genuine ballot reform in New York State; has been for several years a vice-president and one of the executive committee of the New York Civil Service Reform Association; in 1887 joined with others in founding the New York Reform Club, an organization pledged to the reform of the civil service, to municipal reform, electoral reform, and honest money, and which has won especial reputation for its effective work in the cause of tariff reform; is one of the trustees of the club, and frequently serves on its working committees; is chairman of its committee on electoral reform; in the municipal campaign, in the autumn of 1890, served as a member of the executive committee of the People's Municipal League, which was founded in New York City in the summer of 1890 for the purpose of securing the nomination, and, if possible, the election of men of high character and known capacity to the important local offices to be filled at the approaching general election; the interest then developed led to the formation of a permanent political organization of the same name, which has for its sole object the improvement of our municipal government; is now (March, 1891) chairman of the executive committee of the League.

July 17, 1878, was married at Saugerties, N.Y., to Caroline Springsteed, daughter of Dr. David and Caroline (Spalding) Springsteed, of Albany, N.Y.; August 2, 1879, in Brooklyn, N.Y., Eleanor Deming was born; September 10, 1881, in Brooklyn, Ruth Deming was born, and died June 23, 1882; September 13, 1883, in Brooklyn, Harold Simpson Deming was born; May 8, 1885, in Brooklyn, Edith Deming was born, and died January 3, 1886; April 29, 1886, in New York City, Constance Deming was born; May 9, 1888, in New York City, Guy Spalding Deming was born; Oct. 5, 1889, in South Woodstock, Connecticut, Kenneth Deming was born, and died October 11, 1889.

EAYRS, NORMAN WILDER. After graduation was at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology until May, 1872; was then appointed assistant engineer on the survey of the Connecticut River; in February, 1873, commenced the survey of the city of Newport, R.I.; from June, 1874, to June, 1879, was in the employ of the U.S. Engineers' Department, on various works of river and harbor improvement; in August, 1879, was appointed assistant engineer on the Troy and Greenfield Railroad and Hoosac Tunnel; May, 1881, was appointed engineer maintenance of way on the same line; November, 1882, was appointed to the same position on the western division of the New York and New England Railroad, with headquarters at Hartford, Connecticut; October, 1883, was appointed principal assistant engineer in the office of the U.S. Engineer Corps at Newport, R.I.; in November, 1886, was appointed assistant superintendent of structure for the St. Louis Bridge and Tunnel R.R., and on January 1, 1890, was appointed resident engineer of the Terminal R.R. Association of St. Louis; May, 1891, was appointed general manager of the Wheeling Bridge and Terminal Railway Company; is a member of the American Society of Civil Engineers, and is vice-president of the Engineers' Club of St. Louis; has published an essay on "The Ventilation of Tunnels;" December, 25, 1879, was married to Isabella Van Veghten Coggeshall, of Newport, R.I.; December 3, 1880, Norman Wilder Eayrs, Jr., was born; September 10, 1883, Thomas Coggeshall Eayrs was born; November 11, 1889, Ellen Knowles Eayrs was born.

In the spring of 1875, while studying metallurgy practically, he received a sunstroke, which disabled him for work until the winter of 1876–77; now has an office in Boston and is practising his profession of mechanical and metallurgical engineer; November 9, 1876, was married to Edith Hemenway; October 7, 1877, twin boys, Frederic Augustus and Augustus Hemenway Eustis, were born; August 27, 1885, Mary Channing Eustis was born.

He writes: —

"The slip at the head of your notice is practically the story to-day. As you seem anxious to have it amplified somewhat, I may add that I have been and am actively engaged in the management of mining and smelting ores of various kinds. I have done little writing either in a literary, scientific, political, or commercial way; but occasionally have been guilty of attempts at such, in communications to the American Institute of Mining Engineers, of which I have been a member for many years past, but I have never been judged worthy of receiving any honors, so far as I ever heard. I am a member of the Union, Country and City Club Corporations, all of Boston; the Engineers' Club and the Manhattan Athletic Club, of New York; the Society of Arts, a sort of sub-society of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology; a member of the American Institute of Mining Engineers, and a Fellow of the American Geographical Society."

* GOODNOW, CHARLES ASHER. Born at Boston, December 5, 1849.

After graduation passed a year in Europe, and then began the study of law at the Boston Law School; but his health failed him, and he died in Boston, June 17, 1875, of consumption.

[No formal action was taken in relation to Goodnow's death, in accordance with his request. — A. M. B.]

* GREENOUGH, RICHARD GORDON. Studied drawing and anatomy under the direction of his father, Richard S. Greenough, at Newport, R.I., for two years after graduation; then went to the Brussels Academy, where he took foremost rank in his classes. Entering the ateliers of Lefevre and Boulanger, in Paris, he succeeded admirably, and gave promise of becoming a great painter. His portraits were admitted to the salon in Paris, and to the exhibitions at Brussels. One of those exhibited at the Paris Exposition was published in "L'Art," as one of the best examples of American art. He died in Paris, November 10, 1880.

At the annual meeting on Commencement Day, 1881, the Class adopted the following tribute to his memory: —

One of our class who has passed away during the year deserves more than a passing notice. Gordon Greenough was but little known in the class, for, brought up in Europe, he did not easily fall into the rough-and-ready fellowship of college life. He found his chief interest and amusement in delving into dark corners of the library, and there he did more miscellaneous studying than any one probably in the class. It was not, however, until he graduated and began to study painting that he really settled to serious work. After studying two years with his father, Richard Greenough, the sculptor, he went to Brussels and took a high place among the students of the academy. The following year he passed a brilliant examination at the School of Fine Arts in Paris, and began a most thorough course of drawing. He soon drew so well as to be favorably compared with the best of the young French painters, and he was so determined to perfect himself in this matter of drawing, — which almost no Americans have thus far had the courage to do, — that it was only after several years of this study that he began painting. The few crayon portraits which he did the year before his death justified by their fidelity and power his courageous study, and they won him recognition in the art circles of the French capital. So few of us have turned our attention to art, that one who promised as a painter to bring so much credit to his Alma Mater and his country is a peculiar loss to his class.

HAGAR, EUGENE BIGELOW. Studied law at the Harvard Law School, and in June, 1873, received the degree of LL.B.; in June, 1874, received the degree of A.M.; was admitted to the Suffolk bar in October, 1874, and after nearly two years' study in the office of Hillard, Hyde, & Dickinson, opened an office in Boston on his own account; June 5, 1880, was elected to the Common Council of Boston from Ward 10, to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Joseph Healy, and in December, 1880, was reëlected; June 16, 1881, resigned from the Common Council in order to accept the office of assistant city solicitor of Boston, which office he held from July, 1881, to July, 1884; from May 28, 1883, to May, 1890, held the office of secretary of the Handel and Haydn Society of Boston; June 1, 1891, formed a partnership for the practice of law with classmate Shepard, under the style of Shepard & Hagar.

* HASTINGS, LESLIE. Born at Berlin, Mass., April 15, 1849. Died at Cambridge, Mass., May 31, 1887.

After finishing his law studies in 1880 was engaged in mercantile pursuits, acting as attorney for various corporations; March 9, 1882, was married to Mary Grace Howe, of Bolton, Mass.; September 20, 1883, Ethel Hastings was born, and died September 29, 1883; October 9, 1885, Leslie Hastings, Jr., was born.

At the annual meeting on Commencement Day, 1887, the following tribute to his memory was adopted: —

Our classmate, Leslie Hastings, died at his home in Cambridge, after a short but painful illness, May 31, 1887. The news of his death came to most of his friends wholly without warning, and the blow was the more severe, as he had always seemed the picture of health and likely to outlive many who survive him. He had not begun to grow old. His youthful, almost boyish, appearance and manner remained much as when we first knew him. Time had not dimmed the sunny temperament, or interrupted the cheerful flow of spirits, which characterized his early years. His nature was rich in the qualities which engaged the affection of friends. He was modest and unambitious, caring less for worldly success or distinction than the enjoyment of friendship and the calm delights of domestic life. In the quiet pursuit of these tastes he had surrounded himself with all the things which make life attractive,—a pleasant home, wife, child, and friends,—and his sudden call from all these, at the period of highest enjoyment, is a new reminder of the mystery which attends the ordering of our affairs.

We here record our sorrowful and affectionate tribute to his worth and our sympathy with his family, in whose bereavement we share, lamenting his early death, but cheered by the reflection that he was not called to suffer the "cold gradations of decay" which attend age or long illness, and that we can always remember him as in the enjoyment of perpetual youth.

* HODGES, OSGOOD. Born at Salem, Mass., November 15, 1849. Died at the same place November 2, 1880.

Attended the Massachusetts Institute of Technology for two years, and then was employed by the city of Boston as a civil engineer on the Sudbury-river conduit till 1878; April, 1879, was with an engineering party on Atchison, Topeka, & Santa Fé Railroad in Arizona and New Mexico; December, 1879, became assistant engineer in the office of engineer of maintenance of way on the Pittsburg, Cincinnati, & St. Louis Railway Company, with headquarters at Steubenville, Ohio, and held this position up to the time of his death, which was caused by malarial fever contracted in the discharge of his duties in Ohio.

At the annual meeting, Commencement Day, 1881, the following tribute to his memory was adopted: —

Osgood Hodges died at Salem, November 2, 1880.

Extending our sympathy to the family and relatives of our deceased classmate in their bereavement, we delight to remember him as an earnest student, enthusiastic and progressive in his profession; a true friend; a rare and noble nature, who went unstained through the world, and drew towards himself the confidence and affection of all who knew him.

* HOOPER, WILLIAM ROBERT. Born at Marblehead, Mass., February 23, 1849. Died at Washington, D.C., July 6, 1884.

Studied law in the office of the city solicitor of Worcester, and afterwards studied divinity at the Episcopal Theological School at Cambridge; in 1875 was ordained at Nantucket, and remained there till June, 1876; studied again at Cambridge till February, 1877, and was then settled in Gloucester, where he remained until May, 1882, when he resigned on account of ill health; June 11, 1884, while attending a diocesan convention at Reading, he was stricken by paralysis, from the effects of which he died.

At the annual meeting, Commencement Day, 1885, the following tribute to his memory was adopted: —

On the 6th of July, 1884, our classmate, William Robert Hooper, was called from this life, which, to him, had been full of struggles, bravely and patiently endured. Physical infirmities which would have driven most men from all active interests seemed to inspire him to more intense work.

Fighting patiently and bravely through many discouragements, death came to him finally as a welcome release.

We recall with gratification his ability and faithfulness as a student. Retiring and modest in disposition, he won the confidence of those whose privilege it was to know him well. Honest in thought, despising hypocrisy above all things, an enthusiastic seeker for new developments of truth, an earnest Christian, and a loyal member of the Episcopal Church, in whose ministry he served, he has given us, who mourn his loss, a worthy example of patience, fidelity, and courage.

* HOWE, SAMUEL. Born at Cambridge, November 22, 1849. Died at Boston, April 30, 1879.

Studied medicine at the Harvard Medical School; was appointed one of the house surgeons in May, 1874, for the ensuing year, at the Massachusetts General Hospital; June, 1875, received the degree of M.D.; August, 1875, sailed for Europe, and remained there until February, 1877, studying in Dublin, Vienna, and Breslau; opened an office in Boston in the spring of 1877, and continued to practise his profession to the time of his death; May 1, 1877, was commissioned assistant surgeon, Fifth Regiment, M.V.M.; in 1878 was appointed assistant visiting physician of the Boston Lying-in-Hospital; in summer of 1878 acted for a time as the assistant port physician of Boston.

At the annual meeting, Commencement Day, 1879, the following tribute to his memory was adopted: —

Whereas, During the past year death has removed our classmate, Dr. Samuel Howe, and has thereby deprived us of the companionship of one who had endeared himself to his friends by his genial qualities, and by the purity of his character;

Resolved, That we hereby extend to his family in their great bereavement our deep sympathy and the assurance of the affectionate remembrance in which Dr. Howe will be held by all his classmates.

He writes: "Outside the courts, I have done little in making history. I have given up the office of notary public. I now reside at Newport, Minn., but retain my office at 36 East Third street, in St. Paul, where I am still practising law. Have had but one change in my family: we welcomed a son, Henry C. James, Jr., December 26, 1888, at Newport, Minn., my other children having been born in St. Paul. In 1889 I was elected president of the village of Newport, Minn.; reëlected in 1890, and my term has not yet expired. In 1889 I was president for one year of the Harvard Club, of Minnesota. I belong also to the Minnesota Club, of St. Paul. My post-office address is 36 East Third street, St. Paul, Minn. Should be glad to be able to tell of greater accomplishments, but we cannot all be great in the sight of the world."

JAY, AUGUSTUS. Was abroad from spring of 1872 to spring of 1874; October, 1874, entered Columbia Law School, took his degree in May, 1876, and was admitted to the bar about the same time; at last accounts was secretary of the American Legation in Paris; October 3, 1876, was married to Emily Astor Kane, daughter of the late DeLancey Kane, of New York; August 23, 1877, Augustus Jay, Jr., was born; May 13, 1881, DeLancey Kane Jay was born. At the annual meeting, Commencement Day, 1886, the following tribute to his memory was adopted: —

The Class of 1871 tenders to the family of its deceased classmate, Robert Gould Jones, its sincere and heartfelt sympathy. Always interested in all matters relating to the Class, and a regular attendant at its class meetings and reunions, his genial presence will be sadly missed.

The recollections of college days and the pleasant relations of later years making more sacred, day by day, the brotherhood of college life cluster around his memory and intensify our sadness.

Our tribute of love and respect we place beside the grief of his parents, his sister, and his brother, and join them with humble hearts, in hopeful recognition of the inscrutable.

KIMBALL, CHARLES WARREN. Taught in New York City for two years, and attended the New York University Law School; was practising law in New York City at last accounts; March 9, 1876, was married to Mary Clark Coffin; January 15, 1877, Charles W. eral Convention;" in 1890 received the degree of S.T.D. from Hobart College; May 16, 1875, Marian Lawrence was born; February 4, 1877, Julia Lawrence was born; March 22, 1879, Sarah Lawrence was born; December 2, 1882, Rosamond Lawrence was born, and died February 18, 1883; January 27, 1886, Ruth Lawrence was born; May 21, 1889, William Appleton Lawrence was born.

* LEWIS, ELIJAH HOWARD. Born at Brooklyn, N.Y., June 3, 1846.

Passed about two years abroad, and afterward began the study of law, but his health gave out, and he died at Brooklyn, November 6, 1875, of consumption.

At the annual meeting, Commencement Day, 1876, the following tribute to his memory was adopted: —

The Class of 1871 receive with sorrow the sad intelligence of the death of another of their classmates, Elijah Howard Lewis, who, after years of patient suffering, has been called from among us. Of a modest and retiring disposition, careful and conscientious in the discharge of his duties, of more than average abilities, he gave promise of a life of usefulness. During his college course, and after graduation, although a great sufferer, even those who were his most intimate friends never heard from him any complaint, nor even mention of his troubles, unless questioned about them; but patiently and silently he bore the burdens which had been placed upon him, always endeavoring to be cheerful and happy in his intercourse with his friends and classmates.

It is the earnest desire of the Class to express its heartfelt sympathy with his afflicted family in their great sorrow, trusting that God, who in his infinite wisdom doeth all things wisely, will send them comfort and peace.

*McINTOSH, KENNETH. Born at Hammondsville, Ohio, July 1, 1846. Died at Pittsburg, Pa., May 18, 1883.

Went to Pittsburg, Pa., in the latter part of 1871, and began to study law; at the request of Westminster College hi lectures at that institution, on the Constitutional History of the United States, were published in book form, and adopted as a text-book at that and other institutions; September 12, 1878, was married to Freddie Fleming, daughter of Mr. Cochran Fleming, of Sewickley, Pa.; August 12, 1879, Frederick McIntosh was born.

At the annual meeting, Commencement Day, 1884, the following tribute to his memory was adopted: —

Kenneth McIntosh died at his home near Pittsburg on the 18th day of last May. His strong constitution, good habits, and even temperament gave promise of a long life, and though we learn now that his last sickness was long and painful, the news of his death comes upon us like the shock of a sudden and wholly unexpected affliction.

McIntosh had a strong hold upon the Class. Though he formed in college but few close attachments, he had many warm friends and no enemies. He was one of our representative men, and we are apt to put among that number those whose individuality is most clearly marked. Strong and self-reliant, he laid out his course and pursued it, and the fact that few or many followed in the same direction had but slight influence upon his plans. Yet he was by no means careless of the opinions of others, and never obtruded his own where they were not wanted. Modest, unaffected, sincere, and straightforward, he was thoroughly respected and thoroughly well liked.

We are not surprised that at the bar he was eminently successful. Though he made no claim to the gifts of genius which captivate the imagination, his soundness of judgment and strength of character inspired confidence, and his devotion to his professional work insured success. Upon the news of his death the courts at Pittsburg were adjourned, and the tribute paid to his memory by his brethren of the bar shows that he was highly esteemed in the community where he lived, and in the profession which he honored.

We share, while we cannot lessen, the grief of the wife who, with her infant child, mourns in a desolate house, and we shall cherish, with those who have lost a son and a brother, the memory of our classmate, McIntosh.

McMANUS, JAMES. Studied law for two years with J. G. Abbott, Boston, and then practised till the summer of 1879, when poor health and a trouble of the eyes forced him to abandon his profession; travelled in Europe and this country for his health, and has now resumed the practice of law at Natick, Mass.; in 1886 engaged in local politics and was chosen town clerk of Natick, which position he yet holds; is also chairman of the School Committee. Neal; November 29, 1873, Elsie Thorndike Nourse was born; May 24, 1877, Frederic Russell Nourse, Jr., was born.

[A singular mystery hangs over the fate of our classmate, Nourse. He went abroad in February, 1886, for rest and recreation, and was in regular communication with his family up to March 3, 1886. On the morning of that day he cabled his family from London that he should sail the next day from Liverpool on the "Adriatic." The handwriting and signature of that message have been identified as his, and his trunk has been found at Liverpool, bearing every indication that it was packed for his journey home. Every possible step has been taken to obtain traces of him, but without success, and his family and relatives are compelled to believe that he has been foully dealt with. — A. M. B.]

At the annual meeting, Commencement Day, 1886, the following tribute to his memory was adopted: —

One of us has been taken away who was beloved by all who knew him — George F. Roberts. He easily won our friendship and he never lost it. He was in the prime of manhood, a loving and happy husband, and father of a beautiful family. In his college days he was a noted athlete, and his magnificent frame and young heart grew more powerful and younger as the years passed. He was the favorite of many clubs; but most of all of the Papyrus Club, of which he was an old member, and where he had won the warmest affection of artists, poets, novelists, and every other kind of intellectual Bohemian. At one of their gatherings the Papyrus, with tearful eyes, listened to the following beautiful lines from their secretary, Mr. J. J. Roche: —

We summoned not the Silent Guest,
  And no man spake his name;
By lips unseen our Cup was pressed;
And 'mid the merry song and jest,
  The Uninvited came.

Wise were they in the days of old,
  Who gave the Stranger place;
And when the joyous catch was trolled,
And toasts were quaffed, and tales were told. —
  They looked him in the face.

God save us from the skeleton
  Who sitteth at the feast!
God rest the manly spirit gone,
Who sat beside the Silent One,
  And dreaded him the least!

We, his classmates, who seek in vain for fitting words, can only offer to his bereaved family our sincere, our heartfelt sympathy.

The recollections of early youth, the gathering memories of later years, making, each day, more sacred the brotherhood of college life, throng about the grave of our dear classmate, intensifying our sadness.

ROTCH, ARTHUR. After graduation studied architecture two years at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology; in February, 1874, he went abroad and studied in the École Nationale des Beaux Arts at Paris, receiving for various designs, presented in competitions, nine "honorable mentions" from examining juries (no prizes are given); also exhibited as a water-colorist in the Paris salon, and in the Dudley Gallery, London; returned to Boston in August, 1880, and formed the firm of Rotch & Tilden, architects; has contributed articles to the American Art Review and to the American Architect; has also exhibited water colors in different cities; since then has been on a number of commissions for deciding public competitions; is chairman of the Department of Architecture, Massachusetts Institute of Technology; has built many houses in different parts of this country and in Canada, the Art School and Museum of Art at Wellesley College, gymnasiums at Bowdoin and Exeter, churches of The Ascension and The Holy Spirit in Boston, and a number of churches, schools, and civil buildings in other States; is now erecting the Church of the Messiah and the building for the American Legion of Honor in Boston; a year ago was appointed supervisory architect of the half-finished Suffolk County Court-House.

* SANDERS, CHARLES BURNHAM. Born at Dover, N.H., September 23, 1850. Died at Los Angeles, Cal., February 11, 1881.

Entered the Columbia College Law School in 1872, October, 1874, returning from a trip in Europe, he began the practice of law in New York City, where he remained until November, 1880, when he went to California on account of ill-health, and died of consumption.

At the annual meeting, Commencement Day, 1882, the following tribute to his memory was adopted: —

Charles Burnham Sanders died at Los Angeles, Cal., February 11, 1881. His genial manners, his integrity of character, and his sympathetic nature endeared him to all who knew him, while his enthusiastic and successful application to his profession afforded us personal gratification and warranted bright hopes for his future. In lamenting his loss to our Class we desire to express our high appreciation of him as a fellow-student and as a man, and to extend our sympathies to his bereaved relatives.

SANGER, WILLIAM THOMPSON. Studied law at the Harvard Law School one term; from May, 1872, to January, 1876, was in the iron business, in the employ of Edward Page & Company, Boston; was then eight months in the office of the Atchison, Topeka, and Santa Fé Railroad Company, in Boston, and then with the woollen house of Horswell, Kinsley, & French, Boston; was at Harrisburg, Pa., in the service of the South Pennsylvania Railroad Company from 1883 to 1889, and was then in Pittsburg, Pa., as vice-president and treasurer of the Hainsworth Steel Company, Pittsburg, engaged in the manufacture of Bessemer steel; July 1, 1891, entered the office of classmate Twombly; June 5, 1879, was married to Ellen Mary Horswell, of Boston; May 18, 1880, Helen Sanger was born; May 31, 1882, Ralph Sanger was born; September 28, 1887, Margaret Lloyd Sanger was born.

* SAUNDERS, WILLIAM ELMER. Born at Cambridge, October 27, 1850. Died at same place, June 30, 1889.

Was in the lumber business in Cambridge till 1879, and afterwards in real-estate business and building, in Cambridge, until his death.

At the annual meeting, Commencement Day, 1890, the following tribute to his memory was adopted: —

The Class of 1871, assembled at its annual meeting, desires to express its sorrow at the death of Brother William Elmer Saunders, which occurred in Cambridge, June 30, 1889.

Of a quiet and retiring nature, he endeared himself to those who were intimately associated with him in our college life, by his warm heart and generous impulses, and was always interested in and enthusiastic over anything relating to the welfare of our Class, or any of its members.

Though not a seeker for worldly honor or success, he has shown by his devotion to those near to and dependent upon him those higher qualities of affection and self-sacrifice, which must always command our respect and esteem.

To his family and relatives we would extend our sincere sympathy, trusting that the recollection of what he has been to them may serve to soften their grief in their bereavement.

SCOTT, JAMES PATTERSON. Is in Philadelphia, engaged in the affairs of the Texas & Pacific Railroad Company; was married June 22, 1873, but his wife died July 20, 1887; July 1, 1874, Hugh Davids Scott was born.

SEYBOLD, CHARLES FREDERICK. After graduation entered the Law School at Cincinnati, Ohio; was graduated there in the spring of 1873, and admitted to practice; also studied law in the offices of Noyes & Lloyd and J. Bryant Walker; in the fall of 1880 was appointed Professor of Languages in the Cincinnati Wesleyan College; in October, 1882, was appointed Assistant Professor of Modern Languages in the Cincinnati University; July 20, 1871, was married to Carrie V. Clutch, at Cincinnati; November 1, 1872, Emmanuel Frederick Seybold was born; July 21, 1875, Blanche Olivia Seybold was born, and died June 26, 1877; June 6, 1878, Stella Virginia Seybold was born; October 20, 1881, Edna Catherine Seybold was born; January 19, 1884, Percy Seybold was born; October 14, 1886, Edith Seybold was born.

SHEPARD, HARVEY NEWTON. Attended the Harvard Law School, and afterwards upon examination was admitted to the Suffolk bar, and in 1878 to the bar of the U.S. Supreme Court; went to Europe in October, 1872, and also in July, 1879, for a short time; is now practising law in Boston; was chosen a member of the Republican State Central Committee in 1875, and reëlected in 1876; elected a member of the Common Council of the City of Boston from Ward 1, for 1878, 1879, 1880, and was elected president of the Common Council for 1880; elected a trustee of the Boston Public Library in 1878, and a member of the board of managers of the Old South Association in 1880; was elected a member of the Massachusetts House of Representatives for the years 1881 and 1882, and, February 1, 1883, was appointed Assistant Attorney-General of the Commonwealth, which position he resigned in 1888; July 4, 1884, gave an oration in Boston Theatre on the invitation of the City Government; was chairman of the Board of Commissioners appointed by the Superior Court in 1890, to separate certain grade crossings in Worcester, Mass.; is chairman of the Executive Committee of the New England Tariff Reform League; June 1, 1891, formed a partnership with classmate Hagar for the practice of law; November 25, 1873, was married to Fannie M. *SIMPSON, MICHAEL HENRY. Born at Boston, October 19, 1850. Went to Europe in August, 1871, and died at Florence, of Roman fever, April 12, 1872.

At a special meeting of the Class, April 18, 1872, the following tribute to his memory was adopted: —

Since it has pleased the all-wise God to take from us our dear friend and classmate, Michael Henry Simpson,

Resolved, That in our deep grief at this great and sudden affliction we humbly submit our hearts to the will of God.

That we feel we have lost one who, of all our number, by the great talents and noble qualities of mind displayed in his already brilliant career, gave the highest promise of a life of honor to himself, happiness to his friends, and usefulness to his fellow-men. He was a student diligent in the improvement of his many talents, earnest in his work, of broad and liberal thought, and beloved by all his instructors; and we mourn deeply in him the loss of a friend whose warm heart, unassuming worth, and generous, manly character endeared him to all. There is no one of us who cannot recall some pleasant word or kind action of our dear classmate, which made life seem brighter and friendship truer, and there are many who, in his kindness, found encouragement in despondency, comfort in trouble, and help in misfortune. These rich gifts of mind and heart make it especially sad to us that he should be the first to be taken from those who started in life together.

That the remembrance of his virtues brought vividly before us by his sudden death will invite us to follow his example in the path of duty. A true Christian, his life was pure and unselfish, and bitterly as we regret the early close of a life so bright in promise, we still feel that he was with us long enough to exert on the characters of those around him a lasting influence, whose fruits will survive to bless his memory in the lives of others.

That we wish to express our deep sympathy with the family of our beloved classmate, and trust that the knowledge of the good he has done may, in part, console them in their grief at being separated for a time from so dear a son and brother.

SMITH, THEOPHILUS GILMAN. Studied law in the office of E. R. & S. Hoar, until April, 1874; also attended the Boston Law School for a year, and was graduated in 1874; was admitted to the Suffolk bar in April, 1874; is now at Groton, Mass.; May 11, 1875, was married to Julia W. Kaan; June 17, 1876, Theophilus Warton Smith was born, and died March 4, 1878; December 4, 1877, George Gilman Smith was born; April 4, 1880, Lawrence Burleigh Smith was born; March 5, 1883, Edward Chauncey Smith was born; June 26, 1885, Francis Warton Smith was born; April 1, 1888, Theophilus Gilman Smith, Jr., was born.

SPRAGUE, WILLIAM LAWRENCE. Born at Boston, July 21, 1849. Died at Boston, June 22, 1884.

In January, 1873, went to San Francisco, not being in good health; in the summer of 1873 he entered the house of E. E. Morgan's Sons, and remained there until May, 1875, when he returned to Boston; in the fall of 1873 he and several others established a Harvard Club in San Francisco; June, 1880, received the degree of M.D. from Harvard University, and practised in Boston until his death.

At the annual meeting, Commencement Day, 1884, the following tribute to his memory was adopted: —

Resolved, That we deplore the loss of our friend and classmate, William Lawrence Sprague.

That we recall with tender recollection his many good qualities, his kindly affectionate disposition, and his loyal attachment to his friends.

That we tender to his bereaved mother and brothers our respectful sympathy.

SPROAT, JAMES CROSSMAN. Was in the insurance office of C. W. Sproat, in Boston, for six months, and then went into business in Taunton with his father; November 26, 1874, was married to Fannie F. Perry, of Taunton; February 10, 1878, Sadie C. Sproat was born.

STARBUCK, HENRY PEASE. Taught at Phillips Academy, Andover, Mass., until 1873, and studied civil engineering at the Sheffield Scientific School, New Haven, until 1874; then taught private pupils at Newport, New York, and Boston, until September, 1875; then entered the Harvard Law School; was graduated in June, 1877, and delivered the Law School Commencement Part; practised law in New York, in the office of Fellows, Hoyt, & Schell, from October, 1877, to October, 1880, and then opened an office on his own account, in New York, where he now is; January 29, 1883, was married to Charlotte Puffer Baxter, of Nantucket; September 22, 1887, John Austin Starbuck was born. He writes: —

"I have done no literary, scientific, political, or commercial work worth mentioning, unless, perhaps, I ought to note that I was treasurer of The Independent Republican Club, of Orange, in the Presidential campaign of 1884. I have received no honors, that I know of, in any of the four lines mentioned. I have written no books, pamphlets, or magazine articles. I belong to The Union League Club, of New York, although entirely out of sympathy with the political ideas which the majority of that club at present hold. I also belong to the St. Anthony Club, of New York, which is made up of members of the fraternity of Delta Psi, one of the Greek-letter societies which has a chapter in The Scientific School at New Haven, which I joined while there in pursuance of the general principle that leads one in Rome to "do as Romans do," and with which I have since kept up more or less connection, out of regard for the very good fellows with whom I then became intimately connected. I have also been for seven or eight years treasurer of the New England Society, of Orange, New Jersey, which is an organization of some prominence in that city. Of course I belong, like most decent lawyers, to The Association of the Bar of the City of New York, and to the society of the alumni of Phillips Exeter Academy, and, indeed, to a lot of other organizations of one sort or another, which it doesn't seem possible that it can be worth while to mention. I have no college degrees except my A.B. and LL.B., both of Harvard. The only journey I ever took which can in any way be called an extensive or interesting one was a voyage in the bark 'Veronica,' of New Bedford, to Fayal, in the Azores, in the summer of 1885. I was accompanied by my wife, and we returned in September of the same year, in the bark 'Sarah,' of Boston. It hardly seems to me as if this journey were worth mentioning, but I shall leave you to decide that question."

STEDMAN, GEORGE. Studied at the Harvard Medical School until May, 1874, and was then appointed one of the house surgeons in the Massachusetts General Hospital for the ensuing year; is now practising in Boston; has been appointed superintendent of the Massachusetts Eye and Ear Infirmary, and also holds the office of Associate Medical Examiner for Suffolk County.

STEDMAN, HENRY RUST. On leaving college began the study of medicine, and took the degree of M.D. at the Harvard Medical School after the usual course, together with two years and a half of service as house-officer at the Boston hospitals; settled in Roxbury, Mass., continuing in general practice for several years; in 1879 took up mental and nervous diseases exclusively, and was appointed senior assistant physician at Danvers Hospital for the Insane, serving in that capacity and as acting medical superintendent for five years; had also a short term of service abroad as clinical assistant in the Edinburgh Royal and West Riding Asylums; in 1884 took the Minot estate at Forest Hills, Boston, and opened there a private establishment for mental and nervous diseases, combining this work with consulting practice; contributed a number of papers, chiefly upon the care of the insane, public and private, to various medical journals; is a member of various local and national medical societies; received the degree of A.B. Harvard in 1887, "a most gratifying episode in a none too startling career." March 31, 1879, married Mabel Weiss, daughter of the late Rev. John Weiss, of Boston; January 5, 1880, John Weiss Stedman was born; May 11, 1881, Mabel Stedman was born.

STEIN, CHARLES CARROLL. Studied law in Philadelphia, and was admitted to the bar in 1873; practised there until 1878; then travelled in Nebraska, Colorado, Mexico, New Mexico, and Texas; selected Pueblo, Col., as superior in climate and commercial promise; took an active interest in the welfare of the city, and entered the Council as alderman in April, 1881; was made chairman of the Finance Committee, and at the end of that term, in April, 1883, was elected city attorney; was reëlected in 1884 and 1885; practised law at Pueblo, also loaning money, until 1888; then retired from legal practice in order to give undivided attention to loans and investments; was married at Washington, D.C., October 11, 1888, to Kate Penton Trimble, only daughter of the Rev. John Trimble, D.D., and Emily J. Trimble; is now loaning money for Eastern and English correspondents at Pueblo.

STORY, WILLIAM EDWARD. Studied abroad two years and a half, returning home in the spring of 1874; in October, 1874, went abroad on a Parker Fellowship, and continued his studies at Berlin and Leipzig; July 31, 1875, received the degree of Ph.D. at Leipzig, having written a dissertation entitled "On the Algebraic Relations existing between the Polars of a Binary Quantic;" was tutor in Mathematics at Harvard from September, 1875, to July, 1876, then accepted the position of associate in Mathematics at the Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore; May, 1876, was elected a Fellow of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences; from 1878 to 1882 was editor in charge of the American Journal of Mathematics; from June, 1878, to August, 1889, was associate professor of Mathematics at the Johns Hopkins University, when he resigned and accepted the professorship of Mathematics in Clark University, Worcester, Mass., which position he now holds; has written several articles for the American Journal of Mathematics, published under the auspices of Johns Hopkins University, among which are: "On the Elastic Potential of Crystals" (Am. Jour. of Math., Vol. I., pp. 177–183); "Note on Mr. Kempe's Paper on the Geographical Problem of the Four Colours" (Ibid., Vol. II., pp. 201–204); "Note on the '15' Puzzle" (Ibid., Vol. II., pp. 399–404); "On the Theory of Rational Derivation on a Cubic Curve (followed by a note on Totients)" (Ibid., Vol. III., pp. 356–387); "On the Non-Euclidean Trigonometry" (Ibid., Vol. IV., pp. 332–335); "On the Non-Euclidean Geometry" (Ibid., Vol. V., pp. 180–211); "On Non-Euclidean Properties of Conics" (Ibid., Vol. V., pp. 358–381); "On the Absolute Classification of Quadratic Loci, and on their Intersections with each other and with Linear Loci" (Ibid., Vol. VI., pp. 222–245); "The Addition-Theorem for Elliptic Functions" (Ibid., Vol. VII., pp. 364–375); "A New Method in Analytic Geometry" (Ibid., Vol. IX., pp. 38–44); is also engaged on a series of investigations in the Non-Euclidean Geometry, the results of which he is embodying in a memoir, probably soon to be ready for the press. In March, 1879, was elected a member of the London Mathematical Society; June 20, 1878, was married to May Harrison, daughter of Charles and Mary Dorsey Ridgely Harrison, of Baltimore, Md.; September 17, 1883, William Edward Story, Jr., was born.

STOWELL, GEORGE LEVERETT. After graduation studied at the Harvard Divinity School, receiving the degree of B.D. in 1874; from July, 1874, to August, 1875, was abroad; began preaching in the Unitarian ministry, in October, 1875, and was settled over the Unitarian Church in Newburyport, Mass., until September, 1879, when he resigned his pastorate; June, 1880, accepted a call to the pastorate of the First Unitarian Church at Yonkers, N.Y., which he resigned in November, 1884; is now at Lexington, Mass.; June 25, 1874, was married to Ada Tapley Fuller; December 12, 1875, Ellery Cory Stowell was born; December 23, 1877, George L. Stowell, Jr., was born.

SUTRO, THEODORE. Was in the commission business, and also studied law at Boston, until January, 1873, when he entered the Columbia College Law School, and was graduated in the summer of 1874, receiving the degree of LL.B.; is now practising in New York; has given considerable attention to vocal music, and made satisfactory progess; October 1, 1884, was married to Florence Edith Clinton, daughter of Harry W. Clinton, of Jersey City. He writes: —

"NEW YORK, February 28, 1891.

"I desire to supplement the squib about myself in last report with the following: —

"Am still practising law as a member of the firm of Salamon, Dulon, & Sutro, of which I became a partner on February 1, 1889. We are counsel for the German and Austrian governments in this country and most of the large German institutions in this city. In January, 1887, undertook the work of reorganizing the Sutro Tunnel Company, which has occupied a large share of my time since then. Have been successively counsel for the Sutro Tunnel Company, and its president, and am now president of the Comstock Tunnel Company, the successor of the Sutro Tunnel Company. My efforts have been completely successful. In July, 1887,

I published a book entitled 'The Sutro Tunnel Company and the Sutro Tunnel,' which attracted considerable attention and comment all over the world. Am at present a member of the Bar Association, Harvard Club, German Club, Phi Beta Kappa Alumni Association, and numerous other organizations in this city, though I am not a 'club man,' and only perform the duty of paying my dues. Have made a good many journeys across the Continent since 1887, and have gone by every road from the Canadian Pacific to the extreme southern Pacific. Last summer visited the Yosemite Valley, Alaska, Columbia River, Yellowstone Park and made the tour of the great lakes. Have been in every part of the country. My next field will be Europe. My wife, who by the way is probably the best amateur pianist in New York, always travels with me.

"Yours sincerely,

"THEODORE SUTRO."

SWIFT, HENRY WALTON. MEETINGS.

The Fifth Triennial Dinner of the class was given at the Parker House, Boston, June 29, 1886. Forty members present. Dudley H. Bradlee presided. The meeting was quite informal, and all seemed to enjoy themselves thoroughly. Classmate Osborne was chosen chorister of the class, to serve at future meetings.

Commencement, June 30, 1886.

Holworthy 12 was open to the class, and a business meeting was held at noon, W. N. King presiding. Tributes of respect to the memory of William Henry Aiken, Robert Gould Jones, and George French Roberts were read and adopted, and it was voted to postpone action in regard to Frederic Russell Nourse for one year.

Adjourned.

A subscription dinner was given at the Parker House, Boston, November 7, 1886, in connection with the Two Hundred and Fiftieth Anniversary of the founding of Harvard College, at which forty-one members were present. Dudley H. Bradlee presided, and the evening was spent pleasantly in singing and informal speaking.

Commencement, June 29, 1887.

Holworthy 12 was open to the class, and a business meeting was held at noon, Edward Burnett presiding. Tributes of respect to the memory of Samuel Brearley and Leslie Hastings were read and adopted, and it was voted that no formal action should be taken regarding classmate Nourse.

Adjourned.

Commencement, June 27, 1888.

Holworthy 12 was open to the class, and a business meeting was held at noon, Harvey N. Shepard presiding. The secretary reported the death of John Henry Wheeler, and said that, in accordance with Wheeler's request, no formal action would be taken by the class. Remarks were made by classmates Lincoln and Reed, and also by Kidder of '72, upon Wheeler's characteristic qualities as a man and a friend, and the meeting then adjourned.

Commencement, June 26, 1889.

Holworthy 12 was open to the class, but no formal meeting was held, as there was no business to be transacted.

Commencement, June 25, 1890.

Holworthy 12 was open to the class, and a business meeting was held at noon, Harvey N. Shepard presiding. A tribute of respect to the memory of William Ellery Saunders was read and adopted. The secretary announced that a class dinner would be given next year and the Seventh Report issued.
